MANUSCRIPTS AND ILLUSTRATIONS

We are working to transition the finding aids listed here into our new website. Please bear with us during this data transfer.

The Contributor/Finding Aid Index lists the 1,300+ authors and illustrators whose original materials are held by the de Grummond Collection. The highlighted names provide links to the finding aids or accession records for the papers of these contributors. Due to the time intensive nature of complete processing, many collections have not been fully arranged and described. However, unprocessed collections are also available to researchers through the aforementioned accession records. The majority of the finding aids were completed through three grants funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities. As more collections are processed, their finding aids will be added to the Index in an attempt to better describe the complete holdings of the de Grummond Collection.

Transferring Finding Aids to ArchivesSpace

1.1 Overview

Special Collections at the University of Southern Mississippi has recently initiated a project to transfer all legacy finding aids into ArchivesSpace. The AS database can be accessed at <https://specialcollections.usm.edu>, and this address will get you to either the staff or public interface. You will need to set up a log-in and password with Josh Vaughan in the digital lab before you are able to begin.

1.2 Create a New Resource Record

ArchivesSpace uses the term "Resource" to denote finding aids. To create a new resource record:

1. Select the appropriate repository using the "Select Repository" drop-down menu (students will only have access to one repository, so they will skip this step)
2. Select "Resource" from the "Create" drop-down menu

1.3 The Front Matter

After creating a new resource record, use the fields provided to enter your front matter, or collection level data.

1.3.1 Collection Title

Enter the collection's title in the "Title" field. Generally, a collection's title consists of a name segment and a term indicating the nature of the collection being described.
[Example: Victoria Gray Adams Papers or H.A. & Margret Rey Papers]

1.3.1.1 The name segment

The name segment provides the name(s) of the person(s), family (families), or organization(s) primarily responsible for creating, assembling, or maintaining the materials.

1.3.1.2 The nature of the archival unit

Scope and Content:

The Lura Gibbons Currier Papers are comprised of correspondence, newspaper articles, journal articles, reports, speeches, notes, photographs, and memorabilia gathered by Currier throughout her professional library career. The collection spans the years from 1937 to 1983 with the majority of the materials dealing with Currier's occupational experiences. These materials were written, sent, and collected by Currier and reflect not only her philosophy of library service, but also her personal interests.

The Papers are arranged into two subgroups: professional materials and personal materials. Subgroup I is divided into series according to the institutions which employed Currier, the professional organizations she belonged to, and her other career-related pursuits. The series of Subgroup I are as follows: The Harvard School (Celo, North Carolina), 1947; Snohomish County Library (Washington State), 1948-49; Mt. Vernon Public Library (Washington State), 1948-53; Mississippi Library Commission, 1949-69; Washington State Library Consultant, 1968-72; University of Washington, 1967-72; Pacific Northwest Bibliographic Center (PNBC)(Seattle, Washington), 1969-79; and Post-PNBC work, 1979-83. The subgroup continues with series of professional associations: American Library Association; Mississippi Library Association; Alaska Library Association; Canada Library Association; Oklahoma Library Association; Associations and Conferences (of a general nature); Speeches; Press Releases; Publications; Career Related Materials; and Library Information.

The first eight series correspond to the types of employment Currier held. The materials relating to the Harvard School, Snohomish County Library, and Mt. Vernon Public Library are groupings of only one or two folders and consist primarily of correspondence. Currier worked with the Mississippi Library Commission (MLC) for nearly eighteen years, and the papers related to that institution are much more extensive. This series contains correspondence and newspaper articles discussing the establishment of new libraries in Mississippi, regional library planning, and funding for public libraries. There is also information on Currier's application for the position of director, information on her resignation from that position, and materials which outline the standards and practices of the MLC.

The information pertaining to Currier's employment as Washington State Library Consultant and as visiting professor at the University of Washington is limited. The folders contain correspondence and brief reports on such topics as potential consolidations of small libraries and the content of the courses Currier taught, as well as an evaluation of Currier's performance as an instructor.

Currier's final position was Director of the Pacific Northwest Bibliographic Center (PNBC). Much of the correspondence sent and received during that ten year period (1969-79) is available in series 7. These letters discuss the holdings of member libraries, interlibrary loan activity, and statistics on requests. Also worth noting is a group of calendars, spanning the years 1970 to 1975 and 1979, which serve as travelogues. The calendars are a record of the meetings Currier attended and the trips she took. The folders of the series on the PNBC also contain reports on the institution (for example: Sharing Resources in the Pacific Northwest, 1970).

The series on Currier's post-PNBC career describes the work she did following her retirement from the PNBC in 1979. The folder contains letters to Currier requesting her services as a guest speaker and as an adviser on library matters. There is also a letter to Ted Koppel (ABC news anchor) concerning a speech he was to give at the annual conference of the Mississippi Economic Council in Jackson, Mississippi in 1983.

The remaining eleven series relate to Currier's library service outside of her occupational responsibilities. Currier belonged to many professional associations over the years. These included sections of the American Library Association as well as various state organizations such as the Mississippi Library Association. The series relating to these groups contain information on the committees Currier belonged to within the associations (for example: the ALA Library Extension Service Committee and the Public Libraries Division), and on her attendance and the speeches she gave at the conferences of these groups. In addition to the correspondence, the series also contain programs and name tags from the conferences and the bulletins of the associations.

The collected writings and speeches of Currier make up the next large series in the collection. There are near forty identified speeches, handwritten or typed, on paper and index cards. Ten folders of undated and untitled speeches have also been preserved. The speech topics include economic growth in the New South and its relation to libraries, the importance of librarians joining together to promote expansion of library services, and the benefits of a well-operated public library system. Following these speeches is a sub-series of speech notes. In many cases it was impossible to determine to which speech the notes pertained. The notes, therefore, are arranged simply by size, from index cards to regular sized paper.

Series 16 is a grouping of press releases (1949-50). Most of these were issued while Currier was employed at Mt. Vernon and were essential to her achievement of the John Cotton Dana Award for excellence in public relations activities. Some of the topics include a Christmas wish list for the public library, bookmobile service, and special library exhibits. The press releases are arranged in order from dated to undated material.

The published materials (1948-75) which follow the press releases are arranged in the same manner. These works consist of articles by Currier on the subject of public librarianship and published copies of her speeches. Many of these are found in library journals such as the Wilson Library Bulletin or Mississippi Library News.

The final series (18) on ancillary professional activities is entitled "Career Related Materials." It contains correspondence pertaining to positions of employment offered to Currier and employment recommendations she wrote for others. There is also a folder of notes concerning a work on Essae Martha Culver (Louisiana State Librarian, 1925-62) and a folder of unidentified audograms (five inch plastic recording discs). These miscellaneous items are followed by the final series in Subgroup I, a large collection of library information. There are newspaper articles on Mississippi libraries as well as librarianship around the country. Also included are pamphlets, fliers, operational manuals, and short and long reports on various topics. These items form a mini-collection on a broad range of issues relating to librarianship. They cover such topics as library development in Mississippi, American standard specifications for libraries, staff development, and planning-programming-budgeting systems. While they are valuable in understanding the kinds of problems Currier encountered in her work, they also
